

Coordinating Inspired Decor in Your Home With Each Changing Season

changing interiors from "blah" to "ahhh"

Match Your Home's Fabrics With Each Season

1.

Textures are important to create the mood for your room and can be easily switched out seasonally.

Light cotton and linens should be used in summer, while adding in some thicker, wool, and flannel accessories can make a room feel warmer in the winter.

2.

When decorating with certain holiday colors, vary the color's intensity rather than having the same shade of the same color in each accessory. Fabric colors should include shades and tints of the main hue and the accent colors.

3.

An easy way to change your home's mood between seasons is with seasonal pillows, blankets, or rugs, while keeping the colors within the same hue.

Harmonize All Elements of the Fabric

4.

Choose a principal color that you want to base your room's color palette on and match this color, shade, or hue in other fabrics in order to unify your home. Do this while maintaining the same undertone in each piece. Choose a consistent color theme.

5.

Mixing patterns is fine as long as you determine the correct balance between a larger and smaller pattern, and choose a consistent theme.

6.

Combining similar textures while adding in contrasting fabrics, such as heavy and light or smooth and rough, can be a fun way to create harmonizing combinations in your home.

Don't underestimate the power of small accessories

7.

Perking up your home with each season is as easy as adding or switching out a few small accessories, such as a piece of art above your mantel or the floral accessories you have entwined within your home.

8.

Add in warm rustic touches for fall and winter while brightening the room with light and flowery accessories in the spring and summer. Change out these accessories appropriately without letting the seasons run together in your home.

9.

Keeping handy different prints to seasonally swap in and out of a designated frame is a simple and quick way to welcome each new season in your home.
